GARDEN TIPS

The "Buzz" about Native Plants

By Carol Schroding,
Gardening Enthusiast and former owner of Northeast Native Perennials

When the leaves are turning beautiful colors and the temperatures dip even into the 30s, we may imagine our pollinator friends have headed south with the migrating birds. But the truth is, many of them winter over right in your garden provided they have the appropriate shelter. When they get cues such as temperatures dipping, they put their life on hold and go into a state called diapause to survive the winter. Diapause is a state of suspended development like hibernation in mammals.

Some of the native bees and butterflies will winter over as larvae, seeking shelter in leaf litter or burrowing into the ground. Others, such as dragonflies may winter over beneath the ice in nymph form. Still others, such as Ladybugs and beetles, will winter in holes in trees or under logs and rocks. As we mentioned before, some solitary bees will use hollow stems and twigs as nesting sites. Some bumblebees will nest in the ground if you leave a sunny spot of bare ground. If you do not wish to leave your plant stems standing, pick an out of the way corner of your garden and create a pile with your cut stems, leaves and other garden debris. It can still be used by the insects for winter shelter in that form.

When you are assessing plants for next year, be sure to have very early blooming native perennials to host early pollinators such as the rusty patched bumblebee which emerges in March, and late blooming perennials for the pollinators that remain into the fall before going into hiding for winter.

Some of the early native plants you may want to consider are Common Blue Violet (Viola sororia), Jacob's Ladder (Polemonium reptans), Wild Geranium (Geranium maculatum), Golden Alexander (Zizia aurea), Wild Columbine (Aquilegia canadensis) and Spice Bush (Lindera benzoin).

Some of the late season blooming natives that are must haves are Asters (Symphyotrichum sp.), Anise hyssop (Agastache Foeniculum), Purple Coneflower (Echinacea purpurea), Little Bluestem (Schizachyrium scoparium), Short-tooth Mountain Mint (Pycnanthemum muticum) and Goldenrod (Solidago sp.).

Fall chores with your pollinator friends in mind will enhance your garden's ecosystem for years to come and may just ease your workload! Happy gardening!!

Next week: Wrapping up for winter!

THUMBS DOWN

Beware of “sale items” at the supermarket. The sign said buy three and pay a lower price on each. I didn't need three but bought them anyway. Went through the register and the items rang up incorrectly with the non-sale price. The teenaged scanner attendant adjusted the price for me but did nothing to check the sign and fix the root problem even though I suggested she do so. After checking out I even went back, snapped a picture of the sign and showed her so others would not be overcharged. She just shrugged her shoulders and blamed it “on the system.” Double “Thumbs Down” to stores with inaccurate sale prices and to employees who are not bothered to fix the problem “in the system.”

Movie Ticket Contest

If you've been thinking it's about time you treated yourself and a friend to a movie at a very nice theatre, then you'll want to hunker down with this issue of Penny Power and search out the hidden Halloween pets! TEN, yes that's right 10 lucky winners this week will each receive a ticket for 2 persons to RC Theatres Richland Crossings Movies 12 at 185 N. West End Blvd. in Quakertown, so you have an even better chance of winning this week. You may already know how nice the theatre is with luxury heated recliner seats, huge screens and surround sound! Seeing a movie at RC Theatres is a wonderfully immersive experience and this chilly weather is a perfect time to treat yourself to a movie -- or let us treat you to a movie! The contest is soooo tricky this week! There are 5 cats and 5 dogs hidden throughout the ads. Each of the cats and each of the dogs is wearing "BOO" glasses and a skeleton costume! If you can find them all, write the names of the companies where the 10 Halloween cats & dogs appear on the lines below. Your correct entry will be entered into a drawing for a movie ticket for 2 people to RC Theatres. It's a spooky Halloween issue this week -- you may get too frightened to find all the cats & dogs in their "BOO" glasses & skeleton costumes. Good Luck . . . if you dare!!!

Meet the Bucks County Country Gentlemen Chorus

The Bucks County Country Gentlemen Chorus is having a birthday! They're celebrating 50 years of singing a cappella in the Barbershop harmony style in Doylestown and the surrounding area.

The group has a few dozen men who love to sing together. They perform pop, country, folk, jazz, Broadway and classic barbershop songs at local events and senior communities, and at their annual show. They practice weekly at Wesley Enhanced Living Doylestown and love guests. The Chorus has multiple quartets who perform at private, non-profit, and community events, along with offering singing valentines.

This time of year is busy! Preparing and performing their annual show (Nov 8th) is followed by preparing and performing holiday singing at senior communities, Doylestown tree lighting (Nov 28th), and Mercer Museum's Holiday Open House (Dec 2nd).

As their mission is to bring joy to others and themselves through song, the Chorus also partners with Central Bucks School District directors for school events, a Youth-In-Harmony program, and their Annual Show presented by Lenape Middle School.

It must be fun, as two of their members (Bob Gualtieri and Erik Fleischer), have been with the Chorus since 1975! Chorus director, Ritchie Lavene, loves the chorus so much that he travels from central Jersey to Bucks County for rehearsals each week and local performances. Their members, young and formerly young, are always looking for new members to help bring joy by singing, and for new places to entertain.

The Bucks County Country Gentlemen Chorus invites you to their Annual Show on November 8th from 2-4pm at Lenape Middle School Auditorium, 313 State St, Doylestown. Tickets available at the door or call 267-454-2241 for information.

For more information or to contact the Bucks County Country Gentlemen Chorus, visit www.buckscountymbarbershop.com.
