GARDEN TIPS

The "Buzz" about Native Plants

By Carol Schrodung,
Gardening Enthusiast and former owner of Northeast Native Perennials

Winter Series II, Part II: "What Can We Do for the Birds in Winter?"

One more thing regarding feeding... if you have squirrels like we do and you don't want them eating all your expensive food and destroying your feeders, find a way to squirrel-proof your feeding station. (Don't worry, there'll be plenty on the ground for them!) Dennis did this with ours and it took a lot of trial and error and persistence, but he got there. Our feeding station is on a 6' x 4 x 4 post with a section of stove pipe around it, crimped closed at the top. Since it is near one of our black walnut trees, he had to get creative to prevent them jumping out of the tree onto the top of the station. The top is a cross piece that supports all 4 of our feeder types. He again used stove pipe cut in half and made a curved "roof" that they could not land on. The only thing now I must watch is when the shrubs grow and a branch gets too close to the feeding station. Then I have to trim it! Be creative and observe how they get to your feeders to solve the problem.

If you are new to feeding the birds, don't be discouraged if they do not find your new feeding station immediately. It may take some time. Sprinkle some food on the ground to make it a little more obvious. If you build it, they will come!

Water sources are scarce when everything is frozen! When we have snow on the ground as we do now, the birds can use the snow for their water. However, they expend a great deal of energy to do it. Consider providing a water source for them. I put out large plastic plant saucers and fill them with warm water. It will eventually freeze; then I just dump the ice and refill. The birds are resourceful in finding water sources, but they can always use help. They will sit on our garage roof and catch the melting snow when there is some. Of course, there are electric heaters for bird baths on the market if you are so inclined.

Next time: Final thoughts on things we can do to help our birds in winter!

Pet Gift Basket Contest!

We LOVE our pets and this week's winner could surprise your cat or dog pal with a super basket from Rawsomely Healthy Pets, the ultimate pet paradise for all your furry friend's needs. Located in a charming historical building dating back to the late 1800s and originally the home to Springtown's well-known general store (now with a Hellertown GPS)—Rawsomely Healthy Pets was founded to be a trusted partner in your pet's wellness journey. Their mission is simple: to offer only the best in nutrition, supplements, and treats to support your pet's health and longevity. Everything on their shelves is carefully chosen with one guiding principle: if they would not give it to their own pets, you will not find it in the store. Rawsomely Healthy Pets is located at 3201 Main St, Hellertown. The winner of this week's contest will be able to choose a gift basket for either a cat or a dog and will need to pick up your basket at Rawsomely Healthy Pets. But first - since we are all feeling like polar bears this winter - we've gone ahead and brought 10 of them to enjoy this cold, snowy winter with us! Despite loving the cold, they are hiding out in our ads just so you can find them. You'll need to be a strong swimmer like this polar bear in order to find them all. Enjoy paddling through the ads, careful not to fall through the ice. Good Luck!

PET OF THE WEEK

HARRY & LADY

Meet Harry and Lady!

Imagine living your life with your best buddy and sibling, happily going about your days for 13 years, when suddenly your owners decide to move to France and schedule you to be euthanized. That's what happened to sweet Harry and Lady. Thankfully, Harry and Lady were rescued in the nick of time and are now safe in a foster home in King of Prussia. Could you be the second chance they're waiting for?

Harry is a lap cat who likes to gently butt his head against yours for attention, and his best trick is putting both paws on your shoulders to literally HUG! Lady is also a full-figured lap potato, with a trick of her own: She gets on her hind legs and reaches both paws out for love.

Both siblings are spayed/neutered, microchipped, vaccinated, and use the litter box like pros.

Harry and Lady will guarantee that you never again have a cold lap and that you will never be short on love.

To meet Harry and Lady, go to straycatblues.org or call 215-631-1851. Stray Cat Blues is a 501(c)(3) non-profit that's been rescuing area cats for more than 25 years. In addition to fostering and adopting friendly cats and kittens, we Trap, Neuter and Return (TNR) feral cats.
